

Colin Moor Appointed Non-Executive Director of The Inkerman Group

Ashford, UK, 5th May 2004: The Inkerman Group, an international risk assurance company, has appointed Colin Moor, FSI, as a non-executive director to its Board. Providing an unbiased external overview on strategic financial planning, Moor will advise on the company's investment and asset management matters.

Having worked in finance for more than 15 years, Moor brings a wealth of experience with him. Working for a high net worth client base as CEO of his own FSA regulated private asset management business, Rometsch & Moor Ltd, and as a former director for the Union Bank of Switzerland, he has been involved in advising on a vast range of financial issues for a wide variety of businesses and people.

"To be involved as a non-executive Director of a very focused and fast expanding company is an exciting and extremely interesting opportunity, especially in an industry where the needs are constantly changing and security measures become increasingly important," comments Moor. "Having operated in the finance industry for many years I have a thorough understanding of how big and small firms operate. With my knowledge, I will bring benefit to Inkerman from my experience and together we can continue to effectively develop its assets."

Moor will be responsible for assisting Tim Goode, the Finance Director and former FD of The Halifax, in the company's strategic financial business development. Convergence between Inkerman and Rometsch & Moor Ltd, will also allow existing clients from both businesses to continue to benefit from the others experience and advice on security and financial issues, respectively.

Welcoming Colin Moor to the company, Gerald Moor, CEO of The Inkerman Group, said: "We are absolutely delighted that Colin is joining Inkerman's Board of Directors. His experience at the sharp end of finance and his vast knowledge of the industry will be a real benefit to us and the clients that we serve."
