

THE INKERMANGROUP

PRESS RELEASE

INKERMANGROUP INCREASES ITS ON-LINE REACH WITH INSIGHTS NOW AVAILABLE ON TWITTER

17 November 2010

The Inkerman Group has announced the launch of its new twitter service which has its team of Corporate Intelligence analysts actively twittering on a variety of political risk issues pertinent to global operational continuity in the public and private sectors. In addition to using The Inkerman Group blog to communicate on these issues, analysts hope that Twitter will help them to spread the word even further.

Through Twitter, the Company aims to offer the most up-to-date insights on key political, economic and security trends, discuss the latest headlines, uncover critical news that becomes buried in the informational quagmire of the newswires and offer their critical opinions on events affecting international business. As a result they think this latest move will prompt further discussion and debate.

"This new initiative is really designed to communicate on many issues of interest within the international community, but with insights and clarity that are not often found in other media" Gerald Moor, CEO, explains. "Tweeters are invited to follow The Inkerman Group analysts on Twitter for the latest updates on current events affecting business continuity on an international basis – we are looking forward to generating a great deal of debate and opinion."

Inkerman Group is now on Twitter : <http://twitter.com/inkermangroup> - look at the news from our perspective; see whose opinions we consider important and join in the discussion!

The Inkerman Group has already experienced a growth in the interest in its recently launched blog (<http://blog.inkerman.com>)
